Name Chief of Arsenal Project To Aid Small Business Firms

Washington, June 30. (Copley ness concerns; review requirethe current military program, with headquarters at the Joliet, terial wants. Ill., arsenal.

The Joliet arsenal was chosen among 34 sample display and procurement centers in 16 states to help "little firms" in landing army supply contracts.

It will be Egan's job, according to the Pentagon, not only to help small business firms making inquiries about sharing in the rearmament program but to locate sources capable of filling army needs.

productive facilities of small busi-lexander.

Press Leased Wire) -E. John ments prior to procurement ac-Egan today was named by the de- tion; make recommendations to department to aid small contracting officers with respect business firms interested in learn- to competency, capacity, and creing how they may participate in dit of specific small businesses capable of fulfilling arms and ma-

> The move was taken by the army, it is said, to answer criticism levelled by congress against defense procurement agencies for awarding large corporations the bulk of the remobilization tracts.

Egan and others, the army said, will be charged with giving maximum assistance to small companies in search of arms orders. Specialists from the planning of-Egan will be one of 200 such fices met recently at the pentasmall business specialists located gon to devise techniques which s in 33 states across the country. Will be used to bring small busi-The group will assist federal ness into the military production state and authorized private agprogram as laid down by army encies in making an inventory of Undersecretary Archibald S. Al-